Fall 2011 Veterans by Gender

Nearly three quarters (72.1%) of veterans enrolled at PCC in Fall 2011 were male.

Veterans by Gender

In the past five years the gender mix of veterans enrolled at PCC has become increasingly male, changing from 55.4% male and 44.6% female in Fall 2007 to 72.1% male and 27.7% female in Fall 2011.

Fall 2011 Veterans by Age

Veterans are older than the general PCC student population. It is not only that the most common age group for veterans is 25 to 29 instead of five years younger for the general student population. But also that fully half of the veterans are over age 30.

Veterans by Age

The past three years have seen a major increase in the percentage of veterans who are between the ages of 20 and 29, and especially those age 25 to 29.

Fall 2011 Veterans by Ethnicity

Although the ethnic mix of veterans is roughly similar to that of PCC as a whole, there are some differences of note. The largest group, Hispanics, is identical in both cases at just under 41%. But there are fewer Asian/Pacific Islanders among veterans, 18.1% versus 26.5%. Whites are more heavily represented among veterans, 22.9% versus 18.3%. And the percentage of African American veterans, 10.0% is twice that of the percent among PCC students in general, 4.8%.

Veterans by Ethnicity

Similar to the general PCC student population, the percentage of Asians and students of unknown ethnicity among veterans has decreased over the past five years. In contrast, the patterns for Hispanics and Whites has differed from the general student population. While there has been a steady increase in the percentage of Hispanics at PCC in general, for veterans the percentage took a sharp increase in Fall 2009, and has since decreased almost to the level it was at in Fall 2007. The percentage of White veterans has increased steadily over the five years, even though the percentage is essentially unchanged for PCC as a whole.

Fall 2011 Veterans by Citizenship

The population of veterans at PCC is even more strongly weighted toward U.S. citizens than the general PCC student population, increasing from 78.1% for all students to 88.4% for veterans. Permanent residents (at 9.6%) is the only other citizenship category meaningfully present among veterans. All other categories comprise only 2% of the veterans at PCC.

Veterans by Citizenship

Over the past five years the citizenship mix for veterans has followed the same pattern as for PCC students in general, namely, that the percentage of U.S. citizens has increased while the percentage of permanent residents has decreased.

Fall 2011 Veterans by Education Level

Veterans arrive at PCC somewhat more educated than the general PCC student population. The largest difference is the change from having finished High School to having received an Associate degree for about 3% of veterans, and to a B.A. or higher for another one percent.

Veterans by Education Level

Similar to the PCC student population, the education level of veterans has seen an increase in the percentage of students with a High School education. However, for veterans this has happened in the last two years, whereas the increase for the general PCC population has been steady over the past five years.

Veterans by Educational Goal

The changes in the educational goals of veterans mirror those of the PCC student population in general. Although the percentage of veterans hoping to transfer without an Associate degree has decreased, there has been a slightly larger increase in those wishing to transfer with a degree. The result is a modest increase of about two percent in those planning to transfer. Also, the percentage with a goal of improving basic skills has risen 4.1 percentage points to 9.6%, and those seeking to maintain a certificate or license has dropped 3.1 percentage points to 4.5%.

Fall 2011 Veterans by Educational Goal

Although transferring to a four year school, either with or without an Associate degree, is the most popular educational goal for veterans (61.3%), it is a less common goal than it is for PCC students in general, 70.5% of whom hope to transfer. The difference goes primarily into the increase in popularity of interest development (10.9%) and job skills/qualifications (11.2%).
